Spaceport Camden Project Lead Steve Howard Invited to Speak at 20th Annual FAA Commercial Space Transportation Conference

WOODBINE, GEORGIA – January 30, 2017 – Spaceport Camden Project Leader, Steve Howard, has been invited to speak at the 20th Annual FAA Commercial Space Transportation Conference on February 8, 2017. Howard will speak on the panel “Spaceports – A Roadmap Upwards” alongside Dale Nash, Executive Director of Virginia Space, Dan Hickes, Chief Executive Officer, Spaceport America, Craig Campbell, President and Chief Executive Officer, Alaska Aerospace, Jim Kuzma, Vice President and Chief Operating Officer of Space Florida and Brian Gulliver, Aerospace Practice Leader at Kimley Horn. The A panel discussion will focus on major issues facing the spaceport community.

“I am excited to represent Spaceport Camden at the FAA Commercial Space Transportation Conference,” said Mr. Howard. “Participating in a panel discussion with leaders in the commercial space industry is a testament to the enormous opportunity we have in Camden County. The industry understands that Spaceport Camden will be the premiere commercial launch site in the United States and they want to learn more about our progress.”

The 20th Annual FAA Commercial Space Transportation Conference explores the most pressing issues and opportunities within the aerospace community. The day-and-a-half conference highlights new innovation, best practices, and legislative and regulatory issues impacting the commercial space industry. In addition to panel discussions, attendees will hear keynote speeches from industry leaders like Virgin Galactic and influential policy makers like FAA Administrator Michael Huerta and House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy.
